

U.S. equities have always recovered

Any investor who's lived through a bear market knows how unpleasant it can be. History shows, however, that U.S. equities have always recovered, and that bull markets have created far more wealth over time than bear markets have taken away.

Bull markets have outlasted bear markets for 70 years

Value stocks may decline in price. Foreign investing, especially in emerging markets, has additional risks, such as currency and market volatility and political and social instability. Large company stocks could fall out of favor, and illiquid securities may be difficult to sell at a price approximating their value. The use of hedging and derivatives could produce disproportionate gains or losses and may increase costs. Please see the funds' prospectuses for additional risks. This material is not intended to be, nor shall it be interpreted or construed as, a recommendation or providing advice, impartial or otherwise. John Hancock Investments and its representatives and affiliates may receive compensation derived from the sale of and/or from any investment made in its products and services. Growth stocks may be more susceptible to earnings disappointments. A portfolio concentrated in one sector or that holds a limited number of securities may fluctuate more than a diversified portfolio.
