Management’s Discussion of Fund Performance

SUMMARY OF RESULTS

Mid Cap Growth Fund (Class R6/JACEX) returned 2.33% for the year ended March 31, 2025. The broad U.S. stock market rose for the full 12-month period, mainly driven by gains in mega-cap technology stocks. In the first quarter of 2025, however, equities registered their first quarterly loss since the third quarter of 2023, as volatility surged amid investors' uncertainty about the new U.S. presidential administration's policies.

TOP PERFORMANCE CONTRIBUTORS

Communication services | In the communication services sector, which added to the fund’s return, Swedish music-streaming service Spotify Technology SA was a standout.

Industrials | The industrials sector, a contributor to absolute performance, was led by Axon Enterprise, Inc., a maker of technology and weapons products for law enforcement, military and civilian uses.

Palantir Technologies, Inc. | Palantir, a provider of software platforms, was the fund’s top contributor on an absolute basis, rising sharply in early February after the company issued a robust revenue forecast.

TOP PERFORMANCE DETRACTORS

Health care | In the health care sector, DexCom, Inc., a maker of continuous glucose monitoring systems, and dental technology company Align Technology, Inc. both detracted from the fund’s performance in absolute terms. Both stocks were sold before the end of the fiscal year.

Consumer staples | The consumer staples sector hampered results on an absolute basis, most notably due to the fund’s position in e.l.f. Beauty, Inc., a cosmetics company. The stock was no longer held at the end of the fiscal year.

Super Micro Computer, Inc. | Server and storage solutions company Super Micro Computer, Inc. weighed on absolute performance. The company’s shares fell sharply last fall after the resignation of its independent auditor. The fund no longer owns this stock.
